

ABSTRACT

A method for analyzing the root cause of system failures on one or more computers. An event is generated when a computer system detects a system failure. The cause of the failure is determined. The event, including the cause is transmitted from the computer system to a central repository. And the system failure is analyzed in the central repository.